This list of resources was compiled thanks to the Graduate Wellbeing Representatives and GSWN Resource Coordinator of 2016-2018. Please note this list is not exhaustive, but intended to highlight some of the best resources of which we are aware. Many more can be found with an online search.

Note also that this list was last updated in April 2018, since which time some of the resources may have changed.

General Information

What is the difference between psychiatrists, psychologists, and counsellors?

There are many different mental health professions, and their distinctions are easily blurred. We focus on psychiatrists, psychologists, and counsellors below, but mental health professionals also include social workers, psychiatric nurses, and others. In general, we recommend you do some background research to determine which type of mental health professional training and area of expertise are right for you.

Psychiatrists go to medical school to receive their degrees (MD), and specialize in diagnosing and prescribing medications for mental health issues (e.g., antidepressants, anxiolytics for anxiety, stimulants for ADHD, antipsychotics, and more). Their ability to prescribe medication is what sets them apart from other mental health professionals (only MDs can prescribe medication). Some psychiatrists also provide therapy (see below).

Psychologists go to graduate school in Clinical Psychology programs to receive their degrees (PhD or PsyD), and specialize in diagnosing mental health issues and providing various kinds of therapy, including Cognitive Behavioural Therapy (CBT), Interpersonal Therapy (IPT), Mindfulness-Based Cognitive Therapy (MBCT), Acceptance and Commitment Therapy (ACT), Dialectical Behaviour Therapy (DBT), and others. Many psychologists are trained in more than one type of therapy and can integrate them to suit your individual needs. Psychologists can provide therapy in individual and/or group formats.

Counsellors go to graduate school in Counselling programs to receive their degrees (typically Master's-level), and can provide counselling for a wide range of mental, emotional, and relationship difficulties. Although they typically do not specialize in mental health difficulties that are as severe as those treated by psychiatrists and psychologists, they help their clients through struggles with mild to moderate anxiety and depression in addition to grief, stress, difficult life transitions (e.g., career), LGBTQ+ specific issues, family conflict, and more.

A note about coverage

UBC's Student Health and Dental Plan (Studentcare) covers $300 per year toward mental health services provided by a registered psychologist or clinical counsellor. Eligible prescription drugs are covered up to 80%. All students, including international students, who pay AMS fees are automatically covered. You can read more about Studentcare, including how to claim your expenses, here:

http://studentcare.ca/rte/en/UniversityofBritishColumbiaAMSGSS_Health_HealthCoverage&random=487

BC's Medical Services Plan (MSP) covers services from psychiatrists and other physicians, in addition to many medications. You can ask your psychiatrist or GP about which medications are covered. If you are already taking medication(s), you can check if they are covered here:

<https://pharmacareformularysearch.gov.bc.ca/faces/Search.xhtml>

Generally, you are eligible to be covered by MSP if you are a permanent resident in BC. If you are an international student, it is best to apply for MSP as soon as you arrive in BC. Your coverage can then begin as early as three months after your arrival. If you are coming from another province within Canada, you can continue to use your old province's coverage while you wait for MSP coverage. Apply for MSP here:
<https://www2.gov.bc.ca/gov/content/health/health-drug-coverage/msp/bc-residents/eligibility-and-enrolment/how-to-enrol>

MSP does not cover services from psychologists, counsellors, or social workers. To obtain partial coverage, you will need to use your Studentcare coverage and/or private healthcare insurance, for example through a family member or spouse's employee benefits plan on which you are a dependent. You will need to check the individual insurance plan's rules to see if you are eligible for coverage.

COUNSELLING SERVICES: Please note this is not an exhaustive list of counselling services, and you can find numerous other clinics that may be better suited to your needs by doing an Internet search and reviewing the clinics' websites and profiles of individual counsellors. Most of the clinics provide reduced-rate services on a sliding scale that are tailored to several specific needs. Counselling clinics generally do not diagnose mental health issues or prescribe medication.

CLINICAL PSYCHOLOGY PRIVATE PRACTICES: Please note that this is not an exhaustive list of clinical psychologists’ private practices or psychological services more generally. You can find other clinics and services by doing an Internet search. The private practices listed below will also likely be able to refer you to more appropriate services if needed. Registered clinical psychologists can diagnose mental health issues and provide various forms of evidence-based therapies, but cannot prescribe medication. If you feel you would benefit from medication, discuss this with your doctor and they can refer you to a psychiatrist if desired.

Prices vary; some are by donation.
Hobbies	You can find groups and communities who share your interests on the Meetups website: https://www.meetup.com/topics/hobbies/ca/bc/vancouver You can also do an Internet search for hobbies that interest you and choose to a) attend classes or get-togethers to make it a social activity or b) do them solo. If you choose to do them solo, there are many online options including YouTube tutorials, online class sites such as Skillshare (https://www.skillshare.com - they have a Free Classes section), educational apps such as Duolingo (for learning languages; https://www.duolingo.com), and many more.

Online and Phone Resources

ONLINE RESOURCES: The following section includes a non-exhaustive list of educational websites, online chat services, e-therapy, and a variety of mental health apps. More mental health apps, including reviews from the Anxiety and Depression Association of America, can be found at <https://adaa.org/finding-help/mobile-apps>, and you can find others that might better suit your needs by doing an Internet search.
